

ADVERTISED A HAIR WASH.

Senator Joe Bailey Was Disgraced at the Notoriety He Achieved Through Advertisements.

Senator Joe Bailey, of Texas, enjoys the prominence he has achieved in the councils of the nation, but does not hanker after the sort of fame some people seem disposed to force upon him. He has protected the constitution from the assaults of the irreverent and utilitarian political degenerates who sometimes seem to him to delight to trail it in the dust, but he does not like to be used to sustain the pretensions of medicine makers or the pretensions of hair promoters. "A short time ago," said Senator Bailey, with feeling in his voice, "two lady friends in Chicago whom I esteem very highly sent me a newspaper in which, to my surprise and disgust, my portrait was printed, along with those of 'Jo' Cannon and some other equally respectable members of the congress, as guarantors of the excellence of some stuff used by the barbers of the house of representatives. I just sat down and wrote to the advertisers to drop my portrait and intimated that worse might follow. And, do you know, I got a reply in which the advertisers fished for another recommendation by suggesting that I was really not acquainted with the merits of their nostrum. They got out of it, however, by saying that our barber told him he had tried the stuff on Cannon and me and that we had not objected. I never knew that he had."

AUTOMOBILE VEILS.

And Some Other Expensive Novelties for Protecting the Complexion of Ladies.

Everything in dress seems to smack of the automobile these days, and now we have automobile veiling, which is much heavier than a chiffon veiling and finished with hem-stitched edges. Besides looking very nice it has the virtues of being durable and of being a great protection for the complexion. One little shop on Fifth avenue has brought out this novelty together with many others of the more fancy sort, says the New York Sun.

For the women who do not mind spending hundreds of dollars for veiling in one season, there is a chiffon veil hemstitched all around by hand in the daintiest manner. Many fancy effects on white mesh veiling are made by using a large fat dot of white chenille with the finest little dots of black chenille half way around it.

Again there are bunches of grapes in white chenille dots with a little coil stem done in black silk thread. The newest thing in colored chiffon veiling has a medium large dot of velvet matching the color on one side and white on the other.

WATER KEEPS MEN ALIVE.

This Says That Healthy Persons Can Live for Fifty Days Without Other Nourishment.

It is no secret to medical men and physiologists that there is a great deal of nourishment in water. Even that which is sterilized contains enough of solids to keep a human being from death for a long time.

During a prolonged fast the loss of weight is unusually rapid at first and decreases as time goes on. Death ensues when a certain percentage of the loss has been reached, and this percentage varies according to the original weight. Fat animals may lose half their weight, thinner ones perhaps two-fifths, a man or woman, of rather spare build, weighing 143 pounds, might, therefore, lose about 55 pounds before succumbing. Children die after a fast of from three to five days, during which they have lost a quarter of their weight. Healthy adults, however, have fasted 50 days when water has been taken. A German physician reports the case of a woman aged 47 years who fasted for 43 days, taking water freely. She lost 44 pounds out of 143 pounds and died from exhaustion.

Konigsberg, Prussia, has an amber museum valued at 305,000 marks.

Venice has a cafe which has been opened day and night for 150 years.

New Zealand has in its eldeweiss a plant differing but slightly from the famous Swiss variety.

In 6 per cent. of the north Italian and 18 per cent. of the south Italian villages the streets are still used as sewers.

According to the anthropologist Alfredo Niefiore, a north Italian differs less from a German than he does from a Sicilian.

Distilling seems to be profitable in Russia. A Moscow firm, "Widow Popova," has distributed $1,200,000 rubles as dividends for the year 1900 on a capital of 500,000 rubles.

The street-car conductors in Wiesbaden are subject to fines for breach of regulation. For driving too fast a fine of 30 pfennigs (6 cents); for talking to other employees, 50 pfennigs (11 cents) and for not waiting for trailer connection 20 pfennigs (4 cents). Notwithstanding these fines the Wiesbaden street-car service leaves much to be desired.

Taxation in Norway is becoming oppressive, and living expensive in proportion. An example will illustrate this: Two banks having the same capital and doing about the same amount of business pay taxes at the rate of 6,000 and 65,000 kroner ($1,440 and $15,740) per annum respectively. The former of these two institutions is in central Europe, the latter in Norway.

AGUINALDO AND MACAROONS.

Piggishness of a Youthful Namesake of the Famous Filipino.

"It was in London," said the girl, tossing down the little book, writes Caroline Lockhart in New Lippincott, "that I made my last sojourn in the city. At the table next to us at a London restaurant sat a female missionary from Manila, bringing home with her a boy Filipino, evidently an awful example of the table manners of that country. The missionary was a short-haired lady, who wore, among other remarkable things, a sailor hat and big spectacles. Her cloth gaiters persistently teed in; but she beamed with pride as she gazed upon her convert. As for the convert, he looked like a miniature edition of Aguinaldo, and he ate like a pet coon. That night we had macaroons. Now, little Aguinaldo reasoned that he wasted valuable time chewing his food, so he bolted the macaroons as he had successfully gobbled the fore part of his dinner. Whether he did not get the right twist, or whether the macaroons were not boys' size I shall never know. I only know that he suddenly stopped, gasped distressingly and rapidly grew black in the face. The missionary lady leaped to her feet and pounded the back of her head against the wall till she herself became hatless and bereft of her spectacles. The head waiter pranced over and bawled the Filipino's hunched shoulders till it sounded like a drum corps. But his beady eyes only bulged the more. Then they carried the boy and his macaroon out into the hall, where the head waiter swung him by his heels until a yell popped from him that reassured us. But the missionary lady never forgave me for the grin she saw on my face when it looked as if little Aguinaldo's sweet young life was about to be cut short by a macaroon."

Poison in Tubers.

Potatoes contain the alkaloid solanine, although this fact is not generally recognized. New potatoes contain comparatively little of this poison, unless they grow above the surface of the ground and have a green skin, when they are generally known to be poisonous. It is not, however, known generally that old potatoes contain much of this poisonous principle, and that many cases of serious poisoning have occurred in late summer when old potatoes were used.

Candidates for Statehood.

No new states were admitted between 1890 and 1900. New Mexico, Arizona and Oklahoma are now the territorial candidates for statehood.

Knock-Out Drops

"I am a saloon-keeper, and used to think that rock and rye, or whiskey and quinine were proper remedies for colds and coughs. Most of my acquaintances were of the same opinion. Now I know something different."

Now I know something different. It is Acker's English Remedy for Coughs and Colds. A good while ago I began to cough and found out then that rock and rye was no good. I got worse and I was beginning to think that the trouble would run into consumption. I didn't take any stock in patent medicines, but somehow or other I tried Acker's English Remedy. One bottle did the business for me—knocked that cough out completely—and it has never come back again. There is never a day passes that I don't say a good word about this wonderful medicine. I almost forgot to say that I am stronger and healthier now, since taking the remedy, than I was before the cough began. I write this letter voluntarily and cheerfully and am glad to do it." (Signed) CHAS. H. HANNA, Saloon-keeper, Pocatello, Idaho.

A FAINTING ROOM.

"What's this about a fainting-room in the women's building at the Pan-American exposition?" asked a man correspondent of the New York Tribune of Miss Maria De Forest, secretary of the board of women managers. "That's exactly what we've got; come upstairs and I'll show you the room," said Miss De Forest, and, suiting the action to the word she a few minutes later flung open the door.

"There!" said she, proudly. "Isn't that just a love of a room to faint in? Our board of women managers said a fainting-room was a capital idea the minute I suggested it. You know, lots of women travel around on nerve force rather than on real muscle, and they get all shabby ready to drop. We've got this fainting-room for just such. You observe it is done in dark green, with lilacs of the vandy in the wallpaper. It looks out on the upper balcony, which will be covered with flowers and vines. Everything about the room—the carpets, furniture and pictures—all is soothing."

Women managers who go to the length of providing a fainting-room for their weaker sisters can be depended on to look after all the other necessities of a woman's building.

Rather Smoke Than Eat.

One day, writes an American in Havana, I came across an old Cuban woman sitting disconsolately on a rock near Morro castle. She told me in Spanish that for three days she had had nothing to eat but a loaf of bread and some coffee. She looked it. I gave her a Spanish dollar, and then followed in her wake. She entered the first cafe she came to and bought a drink and a cigar. I couldn't help laughing to see her as she walked along the street, puffing away at the weed purchased with my money. She seemed perfectly contented. The Cubans, even the women, would rather smoke than eat. They take only two meals a day—breakfast about ten o'clock and dinner at four in the afternoon."

SPINSTERS TAKING TO BIRDS

Parrots Not in Favor Any More. Perhaps, Owing to the Comic Papers.

The arrest of a woman shoplifter who had stolen a canary and whose theft was revealed because the bird sang when she opened her bag, reminded the bird store man the other day that spinsters and bachelor women were taking to canaries more than they used to, says a New York exchange.

"It's a queer thing," said the bird store man, "but canaries are driving the parrots out of business as companions for lonely women. I don't understand it any more than you do, unless it's because the comic papers have made the possession of a parrot by a woman peculiarly characteristic of an old maid. But it is a fact that the old maids aren't buying parrots any more and are buying canaries."

"A canary's the pleasantest kind of bird to have around the house, anyway, but it's hard on the parrot to be deserted in this way. There's one good quality about a parrot. It takes few likings, but it is usually loyal to the few it does take to, even if it is disagreeable to outsiders."

Department stores are selling as many canaries as the bird stores, according to the bird store man, and the bird trade isn't what it used to be in New York. If the big stores keep on selling birds, he told the reporter, there won't be any bird stores left soon, which he thought would be a pity.

WHOLE TOWN FOR SALE.

Russian Town Sold at Auction for Debt Was a Recent Bargain.

There was recently offered for auction at Melksham, near Trowbridge, a completely fitted health resort, comprising 5½ acres of land, chalybeate springs, baths and ballroom. It is said that over $50,000 was spent on the shaft which brought the mineral water to the surface, yet the reserve set upon the property was only $7,500. Even this sum was not reached, so eventually the property was bought in for the owners, says Stray Stories.

Quite recently there was a Scotch village on the market. It is called Burnmouth, and lies just on the border, a few miles from Berwick.

The Russian town of Verdiechew seven years ago was bought by a man named Roukavishnikov. He paid $300,000 for it. Last year he sold it again. The new purchaser was Count Ignatiev, who paid no less than $1,000,000 for the property.

The town of Verdiechew, a place of some 4,000 inhabitants, was recently sold by auction to the highest bidder. It owed the Russian government and other creditors, and was sold because it was unable to pay.

The Man in Business

MUST be very much alive to succeed in this age of keen competition. He has got to be a hustler to keep up with the procession. Newspaper advertising is absolutely essential to success, which may also be promoted by the judicious use of circulars sent through the mail, calling the attention of consumers to the merits of certain brands of goods, and to bargains in special lines. Your business stationery should be as attractive as the goods and bargains you offer. A few dollars spent in this way with the printer will amply repay you. A trial will not cost much. The ARIZONA SILVER BELT has one of the best job offices in Arizona, and turns out only first-class work. We print letter heads, bill heads, circulars, invitations, posters; in fact almost anything in the printing line.
